From the Camp of the Imperialists, July 25.

AFTER the Action at Kroska on the 22d Instant, we retired to the Camp at Zweybruken where we had lain the Night before: We remained there the 23d; and at Noon were joyned by Count Neiperg's Body of Troops. The same Day a Council of War was held; some of the chief Officers were for marching back again, and offering the Enemy a second Battle; but considering the Want of Subsistance, it was thought better for the Army to retire into the Lines of Belgrade. The Names of the chief Officers who were killed or wounded in the Action at Kroska, are, the Lieutenant Field Marshal Baron Wittorf, the Majors General the Prince of Hesse Rhinfels, Count Caraffa, and M. Lersthner; the Colonels Count Berthold, Minquitzburg, the Prince of Waldeck; the Lieutenant Colonels Plida, and the Marquess Litta; the Majors Count Lanthieri, and M. Palude, killed. The Lieutenant Field Marshal the Prince of Waldeck; the Majors General the Prince of Birckenfeld, Count Daun, Count Geistuck, and M. Grune; the Colonels Dungern, Dernthal, Wetzel, Villanova: The Lieutenant Colonels Count Wurmbrand, Sonnau, the Prince of Baden Durlach, Radicati, the Count de Collovrat; the Majors Ullfeld, Levrier, Kleinholtz, and Sebottendorf, wounded. The Earl of Crawford, a Volunteer, wounded. The whole Loss of the Imperialists killed or wounded is computed at about 5000. Pursuant to the Resolution taken by the Council of War, on the 24th the Army came and encamped within the Lines of Belgrade; we saw no Enemy that Day. To Day, the 25th, the Enemy appeared upon the Hills of Winitza, over against our left Wing, and began to skirmish with our Hussars and Rascians, but with little Loss on either Side. General Pallavicini, who commands our Flotilla on the Danube, has been engaged with the Saicks and other Vessels of the Turks. We have no particular Account yet of his Proceedings, but we know that To-day he brought his Flotilla safe to Winitza, and is expected at Belgrade.

Vienna, Aug. 5, N. S. Our ordinary Advices from the Imperial Army commanded by Felt-Marshal Wallis, import, that on the 26th the whole Army passed the Danube over two Bridges, and incamped near the River Borza. The 28th at One in the Morning they march'd to the Semnitza, and passed over the Bridges and Causeways laid through the Morasses and on the Temes, and encamped at Jaboka. 8 or 9000 Turks appeared as if they designed to oppose their Passage, but did not attempt it, and only skirmished with the Hussars. Last Night an Estafette arrived here with Letters from Marshal Wallis, wherein he acquaints this Court, that having received certain Intelligence of a Body of 30000 Turks being incamped at Panchova, he had on the 29th past come to a Resolution to dislodge them, and having the next Day marched towards the Enemy, they came out of their Camp, drew up in two Lines after the European Manner, and engaging with great Fury, made an Opening in the Imperial Line, which however being immediately closed, he routed them entirely with a small Loss of Men on his Side, and of one Officer only. As it is difficult at all Times to know the Number of the dead and wounded on the Part of the Turks, it is only added, that half at least of their Camp was taken, and that it was owing to a violent Storm that he could not pursue them with the usual Advantages on such an Occasion. These Letters further add, that the Grand Visier had summoned the Governour of Belgrade, and actually opened the Siege in the Turkish Manner.
